A common problem for literary scholars using Zotero is getting titles of works within a source title to be properly italicized in the bibliography. For instance in these examples:

However, Zotero/Word cannot recognize McTeague, North and South, or Clarissa as titles that need to be italicized without a little help:

As you can see in the screenshot above, some extra coding language has been added to the title. You can get a title to show up properly italicized by adding  before the title and  after the title. These two bits of coding language signal to Word to italicize the text between them.
